

Asian and Australasian Society of Labour Economics (AASLE) Inaugural Conference

Australian National University,
Canberra

7-9 December 2017

Call for Papers

Submission Deadline
30 June 2017

The Asian and Australasian Society of Labour Economics (AASLE) is being founded to promote research and cooperation in Labour and Applied Economics across Asia and Australasia. The inaugural conference of the AASLE aims to bring together researchers from around the world and will be hosted by the Australian National University Research School of Economics in Canberra, Australia, from 7-9 December 2017. The Executive Board invites submissions on any topics related to Labour and Applied Economics.

Invited and keynote speakers include:
DAVID CARD, UC Berkeley
SWATI DHINGRA, London School of Economics
EDWARD LAZEAR, Stanford University
THOMAS LEMIEUX, Vancouver School of Economics
JUSTIN YIFU LIN, Peking University, former Chief Economist of the World Bank
STEPHEN MACHIN, London School of Economics
YASUYUKI SAWADA, Chief Economist, Asian Development Bank

Paper submission:
Submissions for presentation should include an abstract (max. 250 words) and a full paper. Contributors are invited to submit papers and abstracts by 30 June 2017 at www.aasle2017.org/call-for-papers.

Organising Committee:
Christian Dustmann, University College London
Bob Gregory, Australian National University
Xin Meng, Australian National University
John Tang, Australian National University

Conference website:
www.aasle2017.org